Use the "Same Measure" And Return New Orleans Schools to Local Control

Dr. Barbara Ferguson, Board Chair Research on Reforms

September 2010

Research on Reforms is a nonprofit foundation, dedicated to improving New Orleans public schools.

If the same measure, which was used to take-over New Orleans schools, were used now, then New Orleans schools would be returned to local control.

In 2005, over 100 New Orleans schools were taken-over by the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education and placed under the control of the Recovery School District. The measure of each school's performance, which determined take-over or not, was whether its performance score was below the state average of 87.4.

The state baseline average was 87.4 in 2004-05. The state baseline average decreased to 86.3 in 2005-06, and then increased to 89.3 in 2007-08.

The 2007-08 year is the last year for which baseline school performance scores have been placed on the Department of Education's website.ⁱⁱ All of the Recovery School District schools, with the exception of Martin Behrman and two KIPP schools, performed below the state average in 2007-08.ⁱⁱⁱ

Thus, if the Recovery School District were evaluated by the same measure as was the Orleans Parish School Board, the Recovery School District would only be allowed to retain Martin Behrman and the two KIPP schools, and would be required to release jurisdiction of all other schools.

The Measure to Judge New Orleans Schools Changes:

From a Score of 60.0, to a Score of 87.4, and possibly to a term called "Upward Trajectories"

First is the question of why the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education (BESE) is now considering the use of "upward trajectories" instead of performance scores to measure success? The standard by which success is measured seems to change to suit BESE's purposes. Recall that, originally, the standard used to take-over a school was a school performance score of 60.0 or less. Schools with performance scores of 60.0 or less were labeled academically unacceptable. Other schools with scores above 60.0 had labels ranging from one star (*) to five stars (). But, six weeks following Hurricane Katrina, the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education changed the score required for take-over from an academically unacceptable score of 60.0 to the state's average score, which was 87.4. This meant that schools labeled academically unacceptable, as well as one and two star schools could be takenover by the state.

Not only did the standard for takeover change, but the conditions for take-over changed with it. The new condition was that only schools in two types of districts could be taken over. First, if the district had over thirty schools, all schools were to be taken over that had performance scores of 87.4 or less. This condition targeted New Orleans, one of the few districts with over thirty schools.

The second type of district that could be taken over pursuant to the new measure was a district wherein fifty percent or more of its students attended academically unacceptable schools. St. Helena parish schools satisfied this condition. In St. Helena parish, more than fifty percent of its students were in academically unacceptable schools. Helena parish schools were not taken-over, even though the law mandated the take-over. Instead, BESE entered into a memorandum of understanding with St. Helena parish officials.

Three years of scores have shown that the schools taken-over, with the exception of two KIPP schools and Behrman, still have performance scores below the state average. In an effort to possibly justify retaining the schools under the Recovery School District (RSD) jurisdiction, the state has again waivered and discussed changing its measure to include "upward trajectories."

Before discussing the problems with using upward trajectories as a measure of success, it is important to recognize the absolute injustice in continuously changing standards to measure student achievement in New Orleans. The children and youth of New Orleans, the most disadvantaged in the state, are entitled to the same fair treatment as students in other districts. To create a law that was applicable only to districts with thirty or more students, and now to possibly change the achievement standard to upward trajectories is a form of disparate treatment that is a basis of civil rights actions.

Why Upward Trajectories Are Not Accurate Measures of Success

Now that the Orleans parish schools were taken-over using the school performance score as a measure, and now that all but three schools taken-over still have scores below the state average, the state has switched gears and has begun to discuss "upward trajectories" as the measure for retaining schools under RSD jurisdiction.

An upward trajectory implies an increase of a path or a projection that is grounded in a consistent baseline value. To define an upward trajectory of test scores, when the basic measure of the test scores is subject to change each year, is not a valid use of the upward trajectory model.

If schools are allowed by BESE to be measured using an upward trajectory theory, then the schools taken-over in 2005 should be examined using the same model. In the take-over of 114 schools, 51 had an upward trajectory of improvement for the three years prior to takeover. ix Thus, using the upward trajectory model, these schools should have never been taken-over. (Table 1)

Table 1: Schools that had improved for three consecutive years, but that were still taken-over by the state in 2004-05

The trajectory asserted now seems to revolve around a trajectory of LEAP and GEE criterion-referenced test scores rather than a trajectory of school performance scores. Yet, ninety-percent of the school performance score consists of LEAP or GEE criterion-referenced test scores, so the issue of test scores versus performance scores is not valid.

There was a upward trajectory in 51 schools before the state takeover in 2005. That upward trajectory did not seem to matter to BESE then, so it becomes questionable as to why it matters now.

It's Time to Question

It's time to question the constantly changing measures by which BESE judges the New Orleans schools. New Orleans is the only major city whose schools are not locally controlled, and whose parents and community have little or no input. There is definite agreement that New Orleans schools should never be returned to the local governance structure that existed prior to Katrina. But, there is growing agreement that return to local control, with a new governance plan, would move New Orleans schools forward.

Endnotes:

Act 35, La. R.S.17:10.7 (A)(1). "Each elementary or secondary school that participates in a spring cycle of student testing and has a baseline school performance score below the state average. . .and that is in a public school system declared to be academically in crisis. . .shall be designated a failing school and shall be transferred to the jurisdiction of the Recovery School District."

Baseline school performance scores, not Growth school performance scores, are used to determine academic labels.

District Composite Report on La. Dept. of Educ. Website, Recovery School District, 2007-08.

^{iv} La.R.S. 17:10.5(A)(1): "An elementary or secondary school operating under the jurisdiction and direction of any city or, parish, or other local public school board or any other public entity which is academically unacceptable. . . shall be designated as a failed school. . . . When the school has been labeled an academically unacceptable school for four consecutive years, the school shall be removed from the jurisdiction of the city, parish, or other local public school board or other public entity and transferred to the jurisdiction of the Recovery School District."

V Act 35, La. R.S.17:10.6 (B)(1) "Academically in crisis means any local school system in which more than thirty schools are academically unacceptable or more than fifty percent of its students attend schools that are academically unacceptable.
